

Your acceptance of these terms

Hello, please be aware that as you participate in the iLeukout.org site, or our other webpages: Facebook, Google Blogger, Gmail, Wix, Plotagon, and Youtube, you agree to abiding by the terms and policies of services, and should discontinue usage if you no longer agree. No one under the age of 13 is allowed to access and use this site, as their adult parent or guardian could do so or supervise instead. If anyone is under 18, please refrain from providing or sending any personal information, unless under parental or guardian supervision. iLeukout does not want to collect any identifiable information from those under 18, without parental or guardian consent. The terms “I, we, us, our,” all represent The iLeukout Foundation.

Common terms and conditions

Please don't patronize or visit our website if you don't agree to our collection of information terms. Users may, however, visit our site anonymously. iLeukout strives to simplify communications in a very complicated and technologically advanced world. We strive to govern our site's communications and practices in an ethical manner. Please inform us of any concerns or misunderstandings as soon as noticed.

On our donor page, donors might be asked to supply some personal information that will be used for billing purposes through Paypal only, unless requested otherwise. When donating, Paypal could ask for your name, address, and payment information through, but that personal information is not given to iLeukout unless you select to. Payment information should be accurate and you should not impersonate any others without their authorized consent. Please be aware that you should keep your payment information confidential, since you are responsible for any operations within and with your account.

Please be aware that personal information could be gathered if you willingly present this. You are not obligated to supply any personal information, and can remain anonymous. For example, a reason personal information such as a donor's name might ever be made public, is if the donor requests that their name and sum given be displayed on our site. Personal information given through private email remains private, unless the owner specifies that it be made public. iLeukout is not responsible for any misuse or manipulation of the content of our sites.

Liability

iLeukout maintains ownership for original content posted on behalf of iLeukout, while iLeukout has no control over comments, reviews, and blogs presented by non-administrators. iLeukout's compilation of free content is an offering of general information pertaining to cancer patients, and does not take responsibility for publishing scientifically significant or accurate data from a large sample size. Please be advised to conduct your own research, use your judgement, and always confer with your medical professionals before adhering to any content on this or any website online. Any information we provide should never be substituted for information provided by medical professionals. In any event anyone suffers any physical, emotional, social, or psychological damage from following any considerations found on our sites, iLeukout will not be held liable. This includes any harm to caretakers, medical professionals, property, and pets. The sometimes satirical or jovial tone of certain dialogue in blogs or our animated series is not and never meant to be disrespectful, but rather shows the multiple layers battling cancer has. There are some good and bad days, along with days for tears, and days that laughter can be heard through the sickest patients' rooms. Our Plotagon series is meant to be an animated fictional version of what might occur to a patient body during a battle with cancer. Again, please confirm with your medical professionals and advisors before attempting or continuing any considerations presented by iLeukout. iLeukout does not make any pharmacological recommendations on our posts. Drug related references are detailed by what methods the author of the post or their medical team might have suggested. Every patient and medical team is different, and what may have worked for one patient may vary greatly for another, including benefits and side-effects.

Copy Rights and Copy Lefts

Site browsing and traditional word-of-mouth or electronic-word-of-mouth are not prohibited by iLeukout. When referenced, proper and ethical citation of iLeukout content must be practiced. No “copyleft” practices are granted at this point. If you feel you have been infringed upon, or notice our information being infringed, please contact iLeukout@gmail.com. Please provide contact information of the copyright party. Please be forewarned about making false and inaccurate claims.

Web browser cookies

At some point, we may use internet cookies, which are stored on your devices, and may improve the online services we offer to users. Those accessing our site can program their internet settings to accept or reject cookies, which may alter the quality of online services observed. In regards to the collection data, this usually pertains to systems being used to connect to our site, internet browsers types, as well as service providers.

Discriminatory Content

When using iLeukout sites, including Facebook, Google Blogger, Wix, Plotagon, and Youtube, remember that iLeukout does not condone, and strongly discourages any form of copyright, hostile harassment or intimidation pertaining to offensive discrimination of age, sex, religious creed, nationality, any other demographics, geographical locations, medical conditions, social classes, or psychographics. Please do not post any offensive comments, images, videos, cartoons, gifs, or any other content that are obscene, and derogatory about yourself or others. Remember, the perspective of others might not be in line with what one might intend, thus be cautious when communicating on this site. iLeukout is not responsible or liable for monitoring and taking actions towards any inaccurate, obscene or profane posts or comments made on our sites.

How we use collected information

When you voluntarily respond and provide information on iLeukout's email, websites, and webpages, please be aware that any non-personal material like name, address, and payment information, are considered as non-confidential, and iLeukout does not have to, but is able to collect and use any information for use, such as advertising, marketing, and research. Emails sent to iLeukout@gmail.com are considered confidential. General materials we collect is usually requested and identifiable info used for processing transactions from donors. This information is only used for the services of processing, and isn't shared with third parties. We use email addresses to respond to emails sent to us, and to send invoices to donors. Subscribers will receive emails concerning current information pertaining to iLeukout. Those who unsubscribe can stop email notifications at any time.

How we protect yours and our information

It is sad that information might benefit others, but could also be hacked and manipulated to cause damage. iLeukout takes measures to ensure the security of communications, but does not guarantee any accurate or inaccurate information is reliable, nor are we impervious to modern-day hacks and potential viruses, or manipulation of information. We are not liable for any potential viruses or damages and losses that may affect your devices or accounts due to accessing ours or third-party websites. Our Wix website is protected and secured by McAfee. Our Google Blogger site has "enabled automatic spam detection for comments." If and when personal information is collected, it is thereby securely protected against unauthorized access with a software protection program. Our warning is that no one should lead or contribute to any efforts in using or publishing any private or personal information gathered from iLeukout.

External links

We do post links that contain necessary content pertaining to certain topics on our sites. As a rule of etiquette, we provide links to references, sources, and any unoriginal content we use or have researched. Our links might redirect you to other sites, which we do not promote or control. iLeukout is not responsible for the terms and conditions/service, or policies of third-party links, so please be familiar with other sites' policies on your own.

Changes to this privacy policy

Things change, and so does the internet, and the rules that govern usage of website content. We reserve the right to change our policy whenever we see fit, without necessary warning. We may change our privacy policy, so please be sure to check back often to review our updated versions. At any time, and without prior notice, iLeukout has the right to alter, add, and remove any part of our Terms of services and Private Polices.

Fighting Five Fund

Five cancer patients that have never been awarded will be awarded grants as part of our Fighting Five Fund each cycle. Announcement for eligible cycles will be available on our website. Awards will be mailed to the patient's treatment center, and can be picked up by patient or nominator. This way, we will not need any residential information from nominator or patient. We do not request any confidential medical records or history of diagnosis from any nominator or patient. We simply need verification from the treatment center that the individual is in fact a cancer patient. See the form below.

Completed form should be emailed to ileukout@gmail.com. Using your own words, please explain the need of the cancer patient you hope to nominate for the Fighting Five Fund. You can write on the form, or use a word-processing method Inaccurate or misleading information submitted can be rejected and not considered as legitimate. Nominations submitted to iLeukout may be used for promotional purposes. For example, we may publish a statistic that 50 nominations were received from the state of New York, or we will announce winners' names on our website and webpages. For example, our website might state: Congratulations to John Doe from Texas, you have been awarded iLeukout's Fighting Five Fund in the amount of $____. Nominator and patient name could also be included, along with information you may provide on your submission.

How we select winners

iLeukout has an independent panel of judges who read the nomination forms, and selects finalists. The first award date is December 25th 2016, and the deadline to submit your two documents are on December 10th 2016 at 11:59PM Central Time. Award amounts will be determined on the award date. Please be advised that by providing information, you are also well aware of our privacy policy.

One (1) patient will be selected from University Medical Center Health System, Lubbock Texas (UMC). Another (1) patient will be selected from the University of Alabama at Birmingham Comprehensive Cancer Center (UAB). Three (3) patients will be selected from any other location in the United States. In the event that we do not receive any submissions from neither UAB nor UMC by the proposed deadline, then five awards will be given to five random locations.

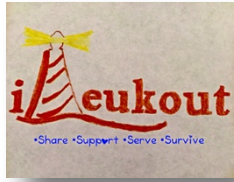

If a patient cannot receive an award, due to uncontrollable circumstances, another patient will be selected. Patients must be nominated by a nominator, not by themselves. The age requirement to be nominated is at least 13 years of age.

Level 1. Initial forms are read and reviewed. Due to the amount of recipients, we may not contact everyone after stage one.

Level 2. You will be contacted once you are a finalist to be awarded. Additional information might be needed, including Internal Revenue Service (IRS) form W-9 link: <https://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/fw9.pdf>

Care Package

During certain events, iLeukout will visit treatment centers and deliver care packages to patients and patient rooms. The contents of these packages could include necessary items for cancer patients including: Biotene products including gels and sprays, lip and hand moisturizers, hand sanitizers, wipes, etc.
